Dan,

You are certainly within your right to cancel our scheduled meeting, but you are in no position to say I'm disseminating misinformation. You have not attended one of my presentations in order to make that assessment.

The information we share in our presentation is sourced with direct quotes and references from the NEA and authors that are proponents of Critical Race Theory (or the newest label being used by educators). The letters and videos we share on the TakeCharge platform are from parents and students that have been directly impacted by the effects of CRT. You are totally within your right to ignore their concerns or label them as heretics, although I don't consider it a good management philosophy.

In regards to our meeting, it was initiated by your office at the encouragement of concerned parents (copied). I agreed to the meeting at their behest. I have met with other superintendents in the area on this matter and a few are like minded with our position.

Although you wish to cancel the upcoming meeting, my door is always open for conversation and collaboration.

With respect,

Kendall Qualls
